

Flexible Living with Space to Gather and Unwind

The Freedom is designed to balance lively gathering spaces with quiet areas to retreat. A covered front porch welcomes you into a defined entry, where two front bedrooms and a shared bath create a comfortable zone for guests, grandkids, or hobbies. Positioned near the front of the home, this space can feel separate from the main living areas when privacy is preferred.

Moving into the heart of the plan, the family room serves as an everyday living space—ideal for casual TV time, reading, or a place where activities can spread out without taking over the entire home. Just beyond, the kitchen anchors the layout with an island that connects both the family room and the great room, keeping conversation flowing in every direction. The dining area sits at the rear with direct access to the covered patio, making indoor-outdoor meals and entertaining effortless.

Along the back of the home, the great room offers a second, larger gathering space with room for comfortable seating and an optional fireplace for added warmth and character. This dual living arrangement provides flexibility—perfect for households that appreciate both shared spaces and the ability to spread out.

Entry from the two-car garage flows through the laundry area, creating a practical transition for coats, shoes, and daily essentials. Privately tucked into the back corner, the primary suite features a walk-in closet and dual-sink bath, offering a peaceful retreat within a layout designed for comfort, flexibility, and everyday ease.
